Getting Started with Digital Humanities

The Digital Humanities Research Guide is available at http://libguides.library.cofc.edu/dh. The guide provides resources for teaching and scholarship in the emerging field of digital humanities.

Working on Digital Scholarship Projects @ CofC

- Digital Scholarship and Services Department: Supports interdisciplinary scholarship at the College of Charleston. Visit the website at http://digitalscholarship.library.cofc.edu/ for more details.

- Avery Research Center: Established to collect, preserve, and make public the unique historical and cultural heritage of African Americans in Charleston and the South Carolina Lowcountry. Website available at http://avery.cofc.edu/.

- Program in the Carolina Lowcountry and Atlantic World (CLAW): Visit the digital initiatives page to view a variety of recently completed, in progress, and future digital scholarship projects at http://claw.cofc.edu/digital/index.html.

- Lowcountry Digital History Initiative (LDHI): Available at http://ldhi.library.cofc.edu/. A digital public history project hosted by the Lowcountry Digital Library (LCDL) at the College of Charleston. LDHI began development in 2013 and launched in 2014 as a digital consultation service, scholarly editorial resource, and online platform for partner institutions and collaborative scholars to translate multi-institutional archival materials, historic landscape features and structures, and scholarly research into digital public history exhibition projects. In 2015 the project was recognized on the annual list of Best Historical materials by the American Library Association’s Reference and User Services Association. For more information visit http://rusa.ala.org/blog/2015/02/01/annual-list-of-best-historical-materials-selected-by-rusas-history-section/.

- Lowcountry Digital Library (LCDL): Available at http://lcdllibrary.cofc.edu/. The LCDL provides professional training and support for archive, library, and museum professionals throughout the region and documents the history and culture of the region while it supports current research initiatives and cultivates creative content and digital information in appropriate formats across disciplines in support of scholarly inquiry. For more information visit the Lowcountry Digital Library Guide at http://libguides.library.cofc.edu/lcdl.

- "How Do I" Guides for tutorials and classroom resources on specific digital scholarship topics and tools. Visit the Digital Tools and Media for Research and Content Creation guide at http://libguides.library.cofc.edu/multimedia.